Opening: new beautiful shared home for young professionals

After Saint-Gilles and Châtelain, Morton Place opens its third beautiful shared home in Brussels: Morton Place Louise.

Living in community, respecting comfort and privacy

After Morton Place Parvis launched in 2011 and Morton Place Châtelain in 2015, MP Louise is the third house in the Morton Place group of beautiful shared homes for international professionals in Brussels. The heart of each house is the common area for members to cook, relax, or work: a generous kitchen with a large communal table, a reading corner and a comfortable living room. Because some things aren't for sharing, each member has their own private bedroom with private bathroom. Fully furnished including superfast Wi-Fi, the house has everything the members need from the moment they arrive in Brussels.

The Morton Place concept is the result of founder Tanya Morton's personal experiences: "I made lifelong friends at the shared house I lived in as a student, but the kitchen sink, the living room floor weren't always the cleanest. When I moved to a big city to start working, setting up things such as utilities was a hassle, and over time I found life in a studio can often be lonely. I wanted to create a balance between the positive aspects of my student life and adult needs." Despite today's connected society, young professionals actively seek community, but they don't want to sacrifice comfort. With this in mind, Tanya Morton launched her first shared home in Brussels 7 years ago.

Co-living with international people

Members of Morton Place are from Belgium and the rest of the world. They choose the MP community to make friends from the moment they arrive and for the convenience of an all-inclusive contract. MP Louise is intentionally designed for harmonious living, with multiple refrigerators, several cooking tops and different areas to relax, or to gather with your housemates to enjoy a movie or meal.

MORTON PLACE

Good design for community living provides the perfect setting for co-living to take place, problem free. Although initially seduced by the beauty of the houses and professionalism of the team, it's the friendships and memories that members leave with that count.

A Brussels “Maison de Maître” tastefully restored

Behind the imposing wooden doors, designers Claudia Ahrend and Isabelle Steemans have succeeded in creating an eclectic decor by giving a modern twist to a traditional atmosphere. Wallpapers from Belgian company Omexco, vintage furniture from Belgium and Scandinavia and luxury materials are inspired by “bourgeois” style of this traditional house with a nod to the contemporary.

As a multicultural area with Art Nouveau architecture and excellent public transport connections, Morton Place couldn't find a better home than Saint-Gilles.
